"If they're Rich's shoes they're proper."

Ten-one F—Cor. 10th.
Entire Building.

If contemplating a trip to the Buffalo exposition, be sure you purchase the proper footwear before leaving. Those who attended the world's fair and Paris exposition know how necessary it is to have comfortable and sensible walking shoes.

Our present line of footwear, both for ladies and men, has been carefully selected, and embraces all the latest and exclusive creations. It is an established fact that foreign-made shoes are not designed to meet the requirements of Americans, and if you intend crossing the water this summer be sure to purchase the necessary footwear on this side.

We are especially proud of our extensive display of shoes for travel, proper and fashionable effects in an endless variety of exclusive patterns.

There is no equal assortment of footwear so well adapted to outing wear as this—that is a positive fact. If you are going to purchase footwear for the "Fourth" then see our excellent assortment.

We have met the great demand for linen and canvas shoes as we should. We are showing double the variety to be seen elsewhere.

We are particularly careful in the filling of orders received by mail, and when size and width of shoe desired is mentioned we seldom fail to make a satisfactory selection.

THE SOCIAL WORLD

What the Folks Left in Town Talk About.

SUMMER REGIRA WELL UNDER WAY

Washingtonians Off in Every Direction.

PERSONAL NOTES

The good folks left in town, as well as those who have departed on their summer wanderings, are having no end of enjoyment discussing the whys and wherefores of the breaking of the Balfour-Sartoris engagement. The situation is delightfully complicated by the fact that while every one knows Miss Sartoris nobody does the late happy man. The explanation given in a letter from the couple is that the couple, after a long and arduous journey, found it impossible to agree on any topic, even the furnishing of their future abode, sounds a trifle ungracious, and is, besides, so dreadfully commonplace that it does not suit the mood of the silly season which is now on us. Even if it is not true, what a little bird says, that the American troupeau will not go to waste, is a much more pleasing interpretation of the problem. The granddaughter of General Grant has not wanted for suitors and has been engaged several times before, and one of these engagements must have been broken with a Cornish, who was also opposed by her father, a former well-known member of the British embassy, until recently stationed in this city. This young gentleman, who is impecunious, is now in the city, and is on leave of absence. It is understood that Miss Sartoris will remain abroad all summer, and while the younger sister is not quite so devoted to her father's country as the elder, she has many warm friends in England outside of her circle of relatives. The marriage of Miss Sartoris to a Cornish, who was also opposed by her mother and grandmother, says those who are best informed on the subject. On the contrary, they wish her to settle the matter in her own judgment, and they will be satisfied with her choice.

The Misses Patten sailed Wednesday for Europe, going on the same ship that carried the Duke of Devonshire, his wife, Mrs. Patten, who are bound for foreign parts also, and will divide the summer between London, Paris and Homburg. The Misses Patten have also a sister, Miss Edith, the accumulation of whose wedding trousseau will require thought and time and a long residence in Paris. The four sisters will be so long that there will be only six days' interval between their landing in New York and the wedding day of Miss Edith and General Cornish, who is also expected to be in the city. The wedding will be in good season for the happy day. While the work on the future residence of the couple was only completed a short time ago, it is being rapidly pushed, and will be ready for occupancy when the short honeymoon journey is over. It is quite in keeping with the spirit of the times that the architect in detail of the house, its decoration and furnishings were agreed upon by the prospective groom and bride during the past few weeks. All the arrangements for the wedding were made, even down to the smallest item, so that everything might be in readiness for the happy event when the principal return to official life. The residents are so eager to welcome them.

It is understood also that the four sisters have so adjusted their private affairs that the future of the Cornishs is not a matter of private and distinct from the rest. Family belongings, jewelry, etc., have also been equally divided among them. The Cornishs have also a sister, Miss Edith, who is now in the city, and is on leave of absence. It is understood that Miss Sartoris will remain abroad all summer, and while the younger sister is not quite so devoted to her father's country as the elder, she has many warm friends in England outside of her circle of relatives. The marriage of Miss Sartoris to a Cornish, who was also opposed by her mother and grandmother, says those who are best informed on the subject. On the contrary, they wish her to settle the matter in her own judgment, and they will be satisfied with her choice.

Mr. and Mrs. John R. McLean will be at Bar Harbor this summer. Justice and Mrs. Shiras are at Marquette, Mich.

Mrs. and Miss Kean, mother and sister of Senator Kean, will summer at Prieder's Crossing
